The world is changing rapidly. There are so many incredible developments that it is difficult (if not impossible) to keep up. Will there be lasting peace in Gaza? Will the U.S. take over Greenland? Is Canada moving toward China? Will the violence in Minnesota ever end? Will Alberta secede from Canada? Those are just a few outstanding questions, and they don't even cover the longstanding issues of morality, gender, or sanctity of life that we have faced for years. One-sided news outlets and social media algorithms reinforce a narrow perspective. Viral videos present a situation that happened in seconds, with no information regarding the hours or days leading up to it. AI creates videos that appear convincing but are utterly fake. Truth is elusive.

In this murky environment of partial truths, Christians are fighting amongst themselves over issues outside the Church – each side believing that their viewpoint is the only proper way to view the world. It is not just “us” (believers) against “them” (unbelievers). For instance, I know believers who say, “how could you defend a government that would send out ICE agents to round up people and end up using deadly force against citizens?” I also know believers who say, “how can you defend protecting criminals who entered our country illegally from justice rather than protecting the lives of law enforcement officers?” They both feel that they represent “the” Christian view.

I am not going to try to resolve those questions in this short letter, but here is a quick thought: There is one reliable source of truth, and it is the Bible. What believers need most right now is Biblical literacy (along with the rest of the armor of God). I have often seen a well-meaning believer take a verse out of context and apply it to a situation. But when we understand all Scripture, we are driven to consider certain things more deeply. For instance, the same God who said to turn the other cheek also said that the government has weapons for a reason. We must seek to understand how those truths work together rather than simply picking the one we like best at that moment.

Meanwhile, our Fellowship churches are focused on teaching the whole Bible in their local communities. This work is vitally important, and our Fellowship exists to help them in that effort.

Thank you to each church for your commitment to God's Word. Thank you to each of you for your ongoing support, prayer, encouragement, and financial gifts. May God grant us wisdom and discernment in every conversation, and may he be glorified in our communities!

You can check out our new Fellowship Focus online for a fuller article on this topic.
